Mick Ebeling is a trailblazing innovator, humanitarian, and the founder of Not Impossible Labs, where he combines creativity, technology, and a deep sense of purpose to solve some of the world's most pressing challenges. Under Mick's leadership, Not Impossible Labs has become a global symbol of ingenuity, developing life-changing technologies that are affordable and accessible to those who need them most.

Among Mick's groundbreaking achievements are The Eyewriter, an open-source, eye-controlled device that allows individuals with paralysis to communicate and create, and Project Daniel, which brought 3D-printed prosthetic limbs to war-torn regions in Sudan. These projects have not only earned international recognition but have also redefined what's possible when human compassion meets technological innovation.

Named one of Fortune's "World's 50 Greatest Leaders," Mick's impact extends beyond his innovations. He is the author of Not Impossible: The Art and Joy of Doing What Couldn't Be Done, a manifesto that inspires readers to embrace challenges and turn dreams into reality. As a dynamic and engaging keynote speaker, Mick empowers audiences to reimagine problem-solving, harness creativity, and drive meaningful change in their organizations and communities.

Mick's work has earned accolades from institutions like TIME Magazine, Wired, and the CES Innovation Awards, cementing his role as a thought leader in human-centered innovation. His talks inspire audiences to believe that nothing is impossible when driven by purpose and creativity.

PROGRAMAS

The Fallacy of “Impossible”

Since the launch of the Eyewriter and Not Impossible Foundation, Mick has passionately studied the concept of “Impossible.” All the modern conveniences we see around us were once considered “impossible” by people who didn’t know any better. Synthetic fabrics, cell phones and digital watches (not to mention cars and computers) were all figments of the imagination until inspiration met execution and the impossible became a reality. In this talk, Mick dives deeper into “Impossible,” the underlying psychological effects it has on an organization, and how to overcome “Impossible” so true innovation can take place.

Audiences Will Learn:

- The psychological effects of the concept of “impossible” on organizations.
- Methodologies and practices that companies can employ to instill a culture where every employee feels aligned with a broader mission, contributing to society as well as to the company’s goals.

Creating a Culture of Impact and Purpose

Imagine what companies could accomplish and be if their entire workforce was activated by a sense of purpose. This isn’t just about employee satisfaction, recruiting or retention; this is about tapping into the Movement of Purpose so that both companies AND society win. In this talk, Mick will delve into the creation of a Culture of Purpose and Impact and the direct effects this has on profitability, productivity, innovation and engagement.

Audiences Will Learn:

- The importance of fostering a sense of purpose among employees and how it transcends traditional markers of job satisfaction.
- How to identify and work with individuals who possess collaboration-worthy traits.

Radical Collaboration

Take a Hollywood producer, a NY professor, a fine artist and a hacker with a criminal record...Put them together and what do you get? A device that helped a paralyzed man create drawings using only the movement of his eyes. Collaboration comes in many form, some of them unexpected. In this talk, Mick discusses the tools necessary to become a stellar collaborator, and to recognize the traits of collaboration-worthy individuals for your next big idea.

Audiences Will Learn:

- The value of diverse perspectives and skills in driving creativity and innovation.
- How to overcome common obstacles in collaborative projects, such as differences in opinion, communication barriers, and coordination challenges.
