The Art and Practice of Conscious Leadership

As leaders we have become experts at analysis and rational thinking, making sense of the world through specialization, micro-management, problem-solving and controlling its separate parts. When we reframe what we see by making the connections between all the parts -countries as kin, corporations as communities- we gain a greater understanding of how all our actions touch and connect.

What Great Leaders Do

The need to inspire has never been greater than it is today, when many people feel afraid, cynical and resigned. Inspiring people in the 1990s was an entirely different proposition, as people were lighter, optimistic and filled with a sense of abundance. Dr. Secretan offers an inspiring alternative, a tested way to learn how to inspire from within one's self.

Reclaiming Higher Ground

Based on Lance's worldwide best-seller by the same title, this presentation inspires a new way to think about leadership and work. The vast majority of people are deeply dissatisfied with their work lives and this affects the bottom line. Lance describes how leaders can serve the needs of their employees and how this improves bottom line performance.

The New Story of Leadership

An established trend is gathering momentum: the hunger to experience spirit in the workplace is gaining the force of a movement. The old story of leadership will no longer satisfy this hunger. Followers are leaving their leaders behind as more and more of them come to work with a new set of expectations.
