María Claudia Tarazona is a Colombian professional in the legal and social sectors, with experience in international cooperation and development projects. Throughout her life, she has combined her academic background with a deep commitment to social and family causes.

Her public role took on a new dimension as she closely accompanied the political career of her husband, Senator and presidential candidate Miguel Uribe Turbay, throughout all its stages—from his time on the Bogotá City Council to his presidential aspirations.

Following the attack that claimed Uribe's life in 2025, María Claudia emerged as a voice of strength and emotional leadership, becoming a symbol of resilience during one of the most difficult moments for Colombia. During that period, she communicated updates to the country and held her family together amid the crisis.
A lawyer and political scientist with experience in international cooperation, Tarazona has demonstrated an exceptional ability to transform pain into purpose, delivering a message centered on dignity, faith, family, and hope.

Today, her voice represents a powerful perspective on human leadership in times of crisis, personal rebuilding, and the search for meaning in the face of adversity.
